Dear Clients and Colleagues

Dickson Rothschild remain open for business.

We have taken a pro-active approach in mitigating and containing the impact of the pandemic. We have no reported cases of COVID-19 Coronavirus. However, we are cognisant of the importance of working together with a shared focus on the well-being and safety of our people and collaborators alike, and to maintain a commitment to project production and time lines.

We will have a significant number of staff working from home and have put in additional other procedures for those working in the office.

Face to face meetings with clients, consultants and suppliers are to be minimised wherever possible, video conferencing and other broadcasting platforms will be used to maintain project communication.

We are asking, wherever possible, that clients, consultants and suppliers do not visit our offices unless critical to do so, to maintain a project commitment or deadline.

Should you have any further queries or wish to discuss our measures, please contact Dickson Rothschild.

We thank you for your cooperation and understanding, together we can deal with this situation.
